Cowtown free enterprise?

Ryckman stunt similar to some E-town capers

BY JONATHAN MURPHY

There was barely any public hand-wringing when the Alberta Securities Commission finally grounded Calgary high-flier Larry Ryckman last week.

The flamboyant Stampeders' owner succumbed to the glacial machinations of an ASC panel which barred him from trading on the Alberta Stock Exchange or serving as officer of an Alberta-based company for 18 years.

Worse still for Ryckman, the RCMP is investigating his business activities.

The great entrepeneur set up 31 secret shell companies which bought large numbers of shares in his Westgroup Corporations Inc. at the beginning of the day, driving up the share prices. Lured by all the activity and the rising value of the stock, investors jumped on the bandwagon. The shell companies would then sell the shares at a healthy profit.

Ryckman's disgrace comes on the heels of Ralph and Colleen Klein's Multi-Corp faux pas. Too much ink has already been spilled on that incident, although a newspaper reported that when Klein the premier got out from under the Dome last week to commune with Alberta's rural folk, a number of people had "never heard of Multi-Corp."

It makes one wonder why the suffragists bothered chaining themselves to buildings in pursuit of the univesal right to vote.

We solid, dour Edmontonians might be tempted to pin the outbreak of shenanigans on Calgarians' free-enterprise fanaticism. The truth is some of our community leaders must have been out smoking behind the toolshed during high school civics class.

Peter Pocklington won the first of 10 lawsuits surrounding the government bail-out of Gainers.

Despite allegations of business misconduct and payouts, the Court of Queen's Bench ruled in Pocklington's favor. Gainers was repossessed by the Alberta Government after Pocklington defaulted on a $55 million loan. Gainers was repossessed by the Alberta government when Pocklington defaulted on a $55 million loan.

Legal wrangle

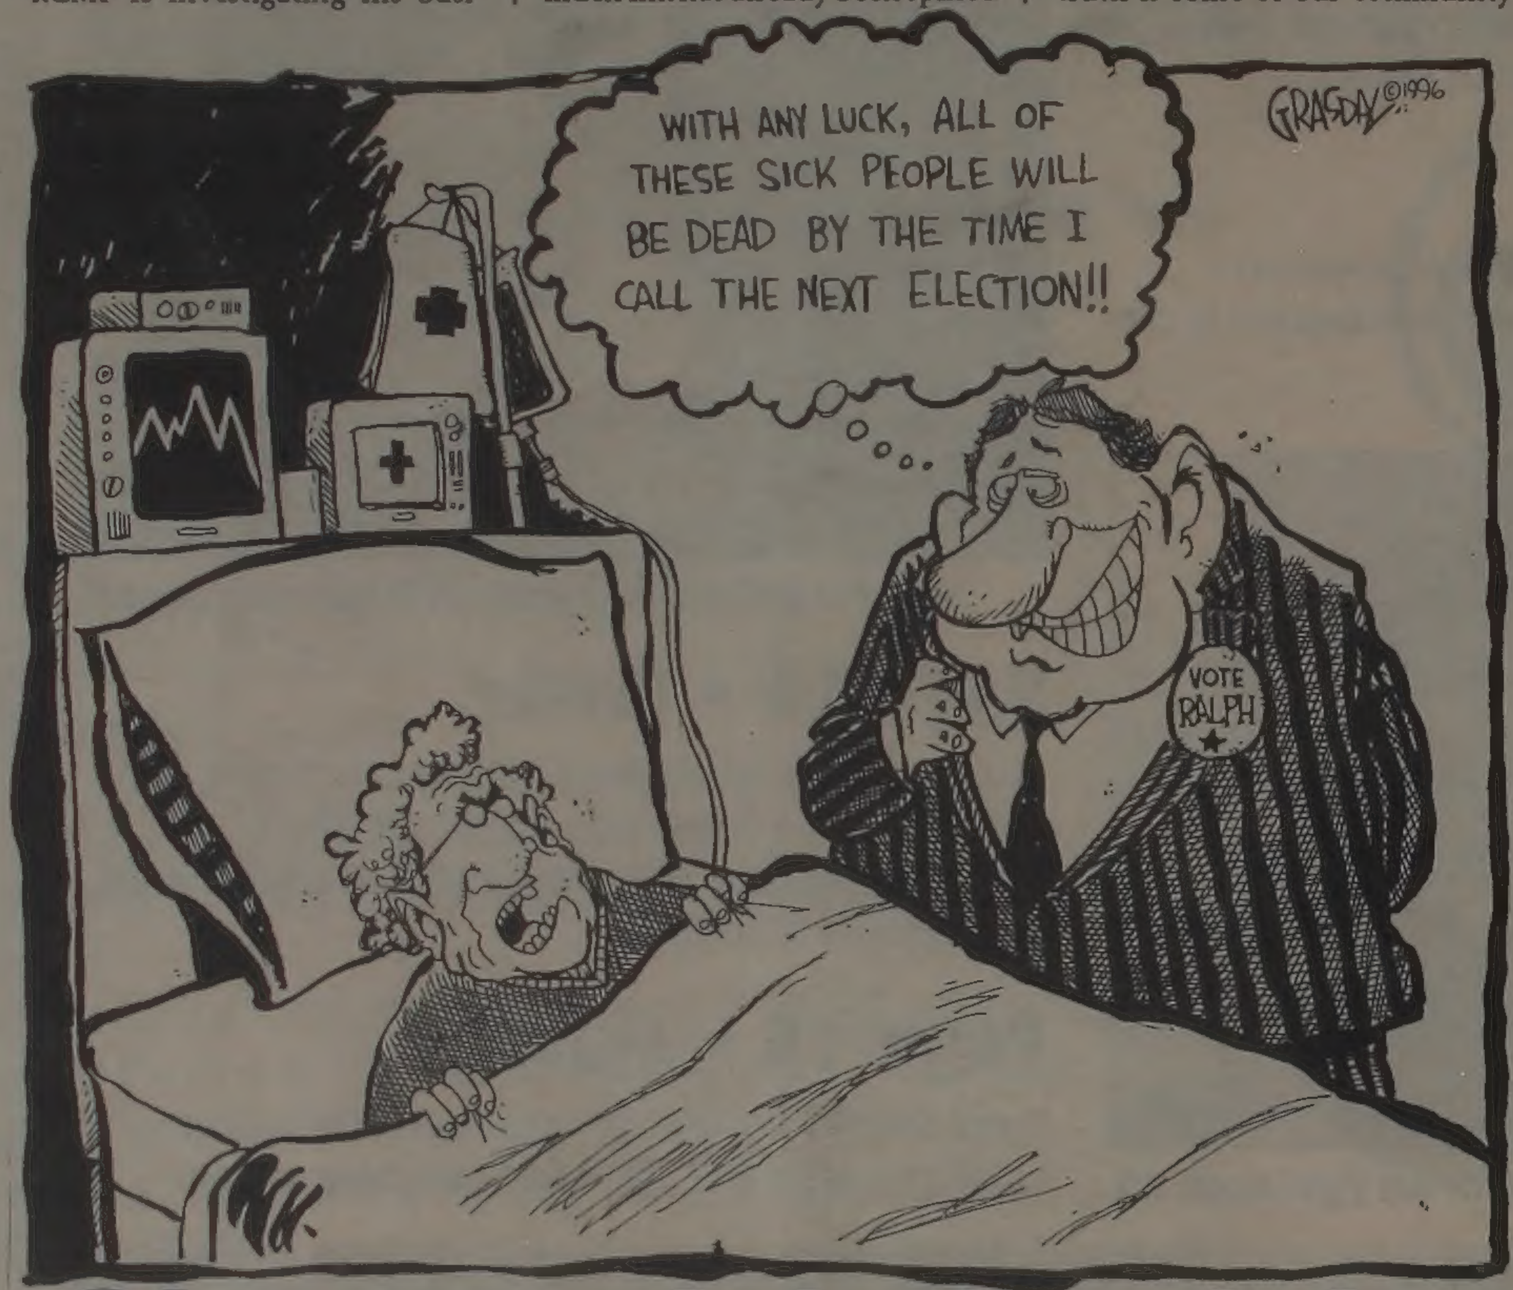
Meanwhile, on the national scene, much-loved former Prime Minister Brian Mulroney is engaged in an unseemly legal wrangle with his former employees in the federal justice department. Civil servants incurred his wrath when it was revealed they were investigating unproven allegations of kickbacks and secret foreign bank accounts in Air Canada's purchase of 34 European Airbus planes.

Each new revelation and allegation of public figures' impropriety generates a predictable bout of scolding editorials and "shocked and outraged" letters to the editor.

Investigators launch ponderous and expensive commissions and inquiries, discharging mountains of evidence which begins as shocking and ends up merely overwhelming.

Years later, they release abstruse decisions which, more often than not, neither condemn, nor fully absolve the alleged miscreants.

The public shrugs its collective shoulders, cynicism confirmed.



C'mon, a joke's a joke

Defending the anti-P.C movement

BY PAM BARRETT

Here's a joke a friend of mine found on the Internet. Read it first, then I'll explain why I am writing about it.

"Welcome to the Psychiatric Hotline.

"If you are obsessive-compulsive, press 1 repeatedly.

"If you are co-dependent, please ask someone to press 2.

"If you have multiple personalities, please press 3, 4, 5 and 6.

"If you are a paranoid-delusional, we know who you are and what you want. Just stay on the line so we can trace your call.

"If you are schizophrenic, listen carefully and a little voice will tell you which number to press.

Manic-depressive

"If you are manic-depressive, it doesn't matter which number you press. No one will answer."

Did you laugh? Me too, the first time I saw this.

But guess what? This joke has become controversial, because it might offend people with psychological disorders.

Yep, another friend of mine put this joke on his office door. All the staff loved it, but the boss said "take it down," for fear that someone might be offended. My friend's office is not open to the public. It is in the back, where clients and customers cannot see it.

Mean-minded

Ordinarily, I don't buy into the anti-political-correctness movement. Too many of its subscribers are mean-minded people who want to be able to hurl insults at segments of society. Yuk.

But in this case, even I have to say "lighten up — it's a joke!"

Sure, most jokes have a victim, a fall guy. I've heard lots of jokes about short people and I don't take offence. Heavens, there was even a popular song by Randy Newman about short people, including a reference as to why we have no reason to live. Not only is the song funny, but it makes a point about discrimination. All the better.

The psychiatric hotline strikes me as particularly funny, because I hate those corporate telephone systems which prevent me from talking to a real person. My mom can tell when I've run into one of them, and she asks me every time, "Did you get put on ignore?"

Whoever made up the joke probably dreamed it up while on ignore. Heck, the person might even have been trying to get in touch with a crisis line worker at the time and started wondering just what foolishness is in store for people who really need help but get "telephone looped" instead. Whatever.

Lighter side

A joke is a joke. We've all been "victims" of them. Hopefully, we can be mature enough to not take offence and to see the lighter side.

If you can't, try harder. Or, just get used to jokes, because politically correct or not, they are going to be around forever. ●

VIOLENT VIEWING

Kudos to Pam Barrett for her article on crime prevention ("Some numbers don't lie," Vue Jan. 18-24). Mostly. Economic deprivation is certainly a factor in the Making of A Criminal Mind, and children exposed to violence in the household are likely to be violent themselves. But the idea that violent movies and TV shows contribute to the delinquency of a minor blames the wrong people.

Yes, Hollywood producers like violent films. They have a proven demographic and can cater to the lowest common denominator. But the ones that should be controlling what children see aren't the executives in Tinseltown but parents: if you don't want your children seeing Terminator 2, then don't rent it when you know they're going to be watching. And if they see it outside your house, talk to them about it.

If kids get violent after watching a violent program, chances are they got that way from something else.

Waxing poetic on inner city poverty

BY MIA GROLEAU

With welfare cases numbering less than 50,000 in Alberta, and climbing by three per cent each month, urban blight is a pretty tough topic to get eloquent about.

But residents of Edmontons' inner city will showcase their artistic talents at a poetry reading this week.

Presented by Spare Change Newspaper and the Inner City Pastoral Ministry, Songs of the Streets — an inner city poetry night, takes place Jan. 31 at 7:30 p.m. at the Gibson Block.

Event organizer Michael Glaser, a volunteer at the Bissell Centre, said Songs of the Streets came as a result of an overwhelming number of poetry submissions to Spare Change Newspaper.

Spare Change creates jobs for local poor and homeless people who sell the paper at various locations throughout the city. The publication is also a showcase for their talents.

Writers in nine categories will win gift certificates or merchandise donated by local businesses, who will supply judges for the event.

Categories range from women's issues to prison poetry, gay/lesbian poetry and memories of a writer's first kiss. There is also a musical category titled Inner City Songs.

Glaser said plans are to have the authors read their work at the event, though he's not sure how many presenters will make it to the evening.

"A lot of people who submitted are actually homeless, so we can't call to notify them because they don't have phones," he explained.

Glaser hopes to contact the winners through the Bissell Centre, where most of them drop in on a daily basis.

Many of the inner city residents who frequent the Bissell Centre enjoy writing as a way to escape their problems, or at least "put them in their pockets for a little while," Glaser said.

Over 150 works of poetry have been submitted. "Every single one of these that I've read, just because you know that it's real and you see how they live... it's really gripping. It really makes you think," he said. "It's just blatant reality."

Glaser said the event should also serve as a reminder that Edmonton has its share of homeless people.

"People need to know about (the homeless). They put them out of their minds, but when you see it and you go there (to the inner city) it's harder to forget."

A sample from the poem "Gauntlet," written by John Chega, about waking up in a shelter for the homeless, mirrors Glaser's comments:

The night mare of another day
Seekers, trying to escape
Tired of the wondering
Afraid of the answers
The why buried in pain and fear.
Walking the alleys to avoid the stares
Humiliated by the condition of my life
Not asking for help
Afraid of the assumed rejection.

Glaser said many of Edmonton's inner city residents have artistic tendences that are sometimes displayed during impromptu concerts at the Bissell Centre.

"They come in and play their own songs that they've written and sometimes it just blows you away," he said.

"There's just so much talent there."

Scott Wicken, an Edmonton writer and accomplished poet, will serve as emcee for the evening and expects to see a lot of talent displayed at the event.

"There's a correlation between hardship and the type of people who create," he said, noting he found this to be true during a visit to Nicarauga, where many of the country's poor write poetry to help themselves deal with their problems.

Wicken added the event will also serve as a means of bringing a diverse group of artists together.

"It's a forum for people who don't usually have an opportunity. In the interests of community, it's a good idea." ●

Ito: a working writer

BOOKS

BY CURTIS GILLESPIE

Sally Ito is a quiet and subtly engaging woman, but to assume she might be reticent or passive about her writing would be a big mistake.

She's a passionate, dedicated writer and her devotion to her craft is a model any author, known or otherwise, could emulate.

A poet, short story writer, novelist (in the making), translator and essayist, Ito is one of those writers you never hear about until they make an entrance to the stage as a fully-formed artist; which is when everybody that ever passed her on the street will say, "Oh yeah, she's great. I knew her when..."

Fortunately, we don't have to get to know her just by passing her on the street. This Friday, Ito is launching her first book of poetry, Frogs in the Rain Barrel, at Orlando Books.

Frogs is a sensuous and evocative collection. Many of the poems are richly symbolic contemplations on nature and the self, the interplay between who we are and the world we inhabit. Yet, they are not dense poems.

Instead they seem to float, whisper, a voice heard in a hallway or a garden which then slips away, as in "Mendeleev:"

"Birds that suddenly scatter/ will form lines/to alert us to this order, this almost palpable/hand of heaven guiding our eyes/to conclusions,/thoughts,/memories,/and prayers."

Japanese heritage

These poems are expressions of Ito's belief that poetry is the written form best able to bring us a report from the soul, from that area most of us can't talk or write about.

As a Christian writer of Japanese heritage, raised in a house influenced by Buddhism, Ito brings highly personal subjects into her poetry, but does so in an impersonal way.

Whatever we are going to learn about Ito as a person through this collection, we will have to infer. But that's the way she wants it. Ito is not a confessional poet.

Being a person of Oriental descent, Ito is also concerned with the issues that face a writer from a cultural minority. And her fiction, published in such magazines as Grain, Prism, and Dandelion, sometimes feature protagonists coming to grips with clashes of culture, although they do so at a spiritual rather than systemic level.

Ito teaches English and Creative Writing at King's College for a living, but she is also working hard at her own fiction.

Besides fine-tuning a story collection she hopes to publish soon, she is also researching a novel based on the true story of Japanese immigrants to Vancouver in the early part of the 20th century.

Patience will be required, since she has to read the documentation in Japanese before she can even begin writing about it in English. But she's in it for the long haul.

"This will be the one thing I want to be remembered for," she says of her current project. "This is what I was put on this earth for." ●

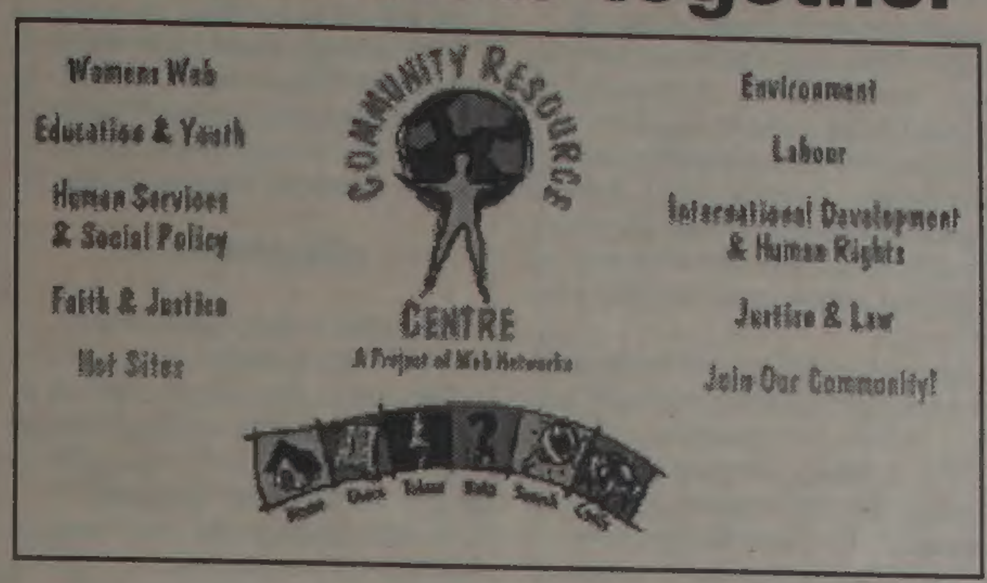
Bringing social activists together

VUE Net

BY JEFF BARNUM



Last Thursday, I met the folks who created the Web.

No, I didn't fly to the CERN laboratories in Switzerland where the World Wide Web was invented; nor did I fly down to California to meet a member of the Netscape team.

You see, years before the Web became a buzzword, social-minded people in Ontario teamed up with other social-minded people to form the Association for Progressive Communications (APC). The Canadian chapter is called Web Networks.

Web Networks (<http://community.web.net/>) was created by Kirk Roberts to facilitate communication between non-profit organizations and various individuals involved in the enviroment, human rights, peace, social justice and international development. Web Networks recently launched its Alberta chapter, with local social activist Bill Moore-Kilgannon as its head.

The year is 1987. Brian Mulroney is our prime minister, Ronald Reagan is the president of the United States and we are still looking over our shoulders for Soviet nuclear missiles to fall out of the sky. The Internet is still the computer geeks' playground, consisting of research scientists and defence officials.

Then, social advocates from around the world invaded this exclusive club with the APC, thus connecting like minded people from Dawson City to Rio de Janeiro.

Today, APC connects over 35,000 groups and individuals from 140 countries around the globe. In Canada, Web brings together 5,000 organizations and individuals.

Web Networks is a success story for the future of communications. Web Networks Program Manager Rory O'Brien spins the tale: "We were in Copenhagen for a social development conference. The government agencies presented a paper that they had worked on for the better part of a year. Within 36 hours, we were able to come up with a response - not only detailing our thoughts, but the thoughts of our constituents back home."

Competitive rates

A member of Web Networks receives Internet access for competitive rates, as well as access to some of the newsgroups that are exclusively available for subscribers.

"Because the public newsgroups are open to all, there is a lot of overhead, and people who clutter up the newsgroups with junk. However, because Web members are generally activists who have little time, the quality of information is higher," says O'Brien.

As well, Web members have access to the Open Text search engines. The Open Text search engine is one of the most powerful searching tools on the Internet. The popular Yahoo directory uses Open Text for all of its online searches. On Web Networks, you can search the news feed from the newsgroups, or from the wire service IPS, which specializes in Third World countries.

One of the groups participating in Web Networks is the Access to Justice Network(ACJNet), which is a joint project between the Department of Justice, Web Networks, and our very own University of Alberta legal beagles. ACJNet links public legal education organizations, lawyers, government agencies and various other legal types, allowing them to respond to an inquiry quickly and efficiently.

Web networks has the same effect on social change that the Internet had for scientific thought. As scientists were able to communicate more efficiently, science progressed at a exponential rate. With the "credibility and knowledge" afforded by Web Networks, social change will also experience this growth. ●

The University of Alberta's International Centre will be hosting International Week '96: Connecting people, issues, ideas and actions locally and internationally, a week-long (Jan. 26-Feb. 3) series of speakers, discussions, displays and performing arts on international issues and themes. You can catch Bill Moore-Kilgannon hosting a presentation of the WEB Network on Jan. 29, at 2 p.m. on the U of A campus in the HUB International Centre Lobby.

Jeff Barnum welcomes any thoughts. Any at all. He may be reached at <barnum@tic.ab.ca>.

Otherwise...

THEATRE ReVUE

BY CHAUNCEY FEATHERSTONE

I didn't get it. Northern Light Theatre's world premiere of Connie Gault's third play, Otherwise Bob, escaped me.

In Act One, Jennifer (Marina Stephenson Kerr) stumbles into Bob's (Brian Linds) bookstore, searching for a particular book, which he doesn't happen to have in stock. This lack causes her some grief.

Before she leaves in tears, Bob's father hands her a card. It's an ad for a live-in caregiver. She answers the ad and accepts the job in spite of her own objections to leaving her husband and child.

As she cares for Bob's catatonic mother, she becomes quite nasty.

Act Two, one might think, would clear things up. Bob stumbles into Jennifer's world... Oh, hell.

Gault, at first, appears to play with time. Then suddenly you're not so sure it's time, maybe it's alternative realities. Then maybe it's alternate solopsisms. Maybe not. Symbol and metaphor sproing out all over the place. What's in the playwright's left brain?

Otherwise Bob is a total theatre experience. Just dunno what it means. ●

Walterdale raises a big racket

THEATRE PreVUE

BY ARAXI ARSLANIAN

You want insanity? You like sardines, maybe? How about a little mania on the side? The Walterdale has just the thing to satisfy the prickliest palate.

Noises Off, a Broadway smash and West End megahit, will be playing at the space Jan. 31-Feb. 10.

The story extolls the miseries and dramas experienced by a troupe of second-rate actors during a touring show. Act One is the frantic rehearsal of "Nothing On," a British sex farce; Act Two shows the backstage chaos of missed cues and soured romances; Act Three is three months later... and the show is unrecognizable. Wacka wacka wacka!

"This play is very timing-specific," says director Gail Barrington-Moss. "I think we've spent four hours on scene changes alone. I sometimes feel like a traffic cop."

Barrington-Moss admits to a certain respect for Michael Frayn's script, despite her troubles.

"It's a lovely show. I saw it years ago about four times, I loved it so much. It's beautifully crafted. Considering January, when we've all got the blahs, it's the best thing for it.".

And she should know! This fiesty lady has worked on some of Edmonton's most impressive community theatre fare. For instance, Elizabeth The Queen had a cast of 50... mere peanuts compared to a cast of nine in Noises.

Big casts

"Big casts don't scare me," says Barrington-Moss.

"My only fear is not being able to give all the actors time. Community theatre can do things that other companies can't, like huge casts and long rehearsals. It's a luxury."

Let's not forget that even the illustrious Brad Fraser had his start in community theatre, along with many other present-day professionals.

"Without the creation of the Walterdale 36 years ago, there would be no theatre community in Edmonton. It teaches patience, giving of your time unselfishly, and a love for the arts," says Barrington-Moss.

Noises Off stars Kimberly Bitensky, Mary Glenfield, Sandy Kordyback, David Mackintosh, Susan MacNeill, Gerald Mason, Robert McKoen, Chris Postle and John Rivet. ●

A nose by any other name...

THEATRE PreVUE

BY AUDREY WEBB

Walt Disney popularized Pinocchio, the wooden puppet that pined for the day when it can become a real boy. Stage Polaris hopes to bring the classic tale to life in its upcoming production.

Susan M. Woywitka, who wrote the script, bypassed the Disney version and returned to the source for her stage adaptation. The original book, completed by Carlo Collodi in 1883, contains 36 chapters and a heavy dose of morality. Collodi was intent on teaching his readers the only way to improve one's life was to follow their parents' rules, always tell the truth and go to school.

The action has been whittled down considerably but Woywitka, who also directs the show, believes her work retains the message and Italian flavor.

A popular theatrical style in Collodi's time was the commedia dell'arte, which Woywitka feels heavily influenced the original work. The play, set in 19th century Italy, uses bold colors, broad characters and commedia's bright, physical style of acting to hold the attention of young ones.

When the show toured the province in the spring of 1995, Michele Martinuk played the lead, a role she is happy to repeat. She recalls it took a while for the kids to accept a woman in the role of a young puppet/boy.

"When I announced at the beginning of the show that I'd be playing Pinocchio, you could hear a lot of whispering."

Being trained as a dancer has helped Martinuk with the physical demands of the show. Moving "jointedly" is what Martinuk cites as her biggest challenge.

Joining her in this production are Jimmy Hodges and Dawn Suchoboki, also repeat performers. These two actors portray a total of 11 characters in less than an hour. Suchoboki plays a cricket, by Jiminy, but not the singing variety. Expect some music, even though the show is not considered a musical.

Erin Haid's set provides a wide range of locations as Pinocchio follows his nose on his quest for mortality. ●

Benedict over easy

THEATRE PreVUE

BY PAUL COMPASSI

In the '70s, Paul Benedict was a geeky neighbor named Bentley, "movin' on up" with Weezie and the gang on The Jeffersons.

Next week, the Bostonian actor moves onto the Mayfield Dinner Theatre stage for its two-month run of Funny Money, a mistaken-identity Brit slapstick comedy.

For Benedict, who bore the brunt of Sherman Hemsley's insults on The Jeffersons for nine of the show's 12 seasons, there was no mistake about going back to live theatre two years ago.

"I haven't had more than two days off, but I love it," said Benedict. "I hadn't done back-to-back plays since I was a kid."

One play he worked on in Cambridge, Mass. was comedian-turned-playwright Steve Martin's Picasso and the Lapin Agile, now a hit in New York.

He also played a bitter judge in the first Addams Family movie and spent a month with Barbra Streisand in Africa filming a fantasy sequence for Up the Sandbox.

But playing to a live house is a far cry from the tedium of a sitcom, especially after playing the same character for nearly a decade.

"Jokes and situations were slightly the same, just repeated," said Benedict about his time on The Jeffersons. "So in doing a series for nine years, it was a stretch to keep it fresh."

But how does it compare to keeping a string of cliches fresh in a Ray Cooney farce, namely Funny Money?

"The trick is to make it real, just as silly as it's supposed to be, because Ray Cooney makes the characters act quickly and you have to believe in the part. Otherwise, it doesn't work." ●

DANCE
BY ANDREA RABINOVITCH
PreVUE

Virtually every modern dance choreographer produced in Edmonton in the last 16 years, has felt Brian Webb's presence.

With his Emerging Choreographers concert, featuring the work of Bobbi Todd, Tania Alvarado and Debbie Onufreychuk, 1996 is no exception.

As department head of the dance program at Grant MacEwan College and Artistic Director of the Brian Webb Dance Company, he's been able to recognize talent, nurture and produce it.

Dance in Edmonton is a rather odd beast because of the population base and its isolated locale. Grant MacEwan dancers often leave the city after graduation, finding few outlets for their work unless they produce it themselves. This path can be daunting.

The Brian Webb Dance Company's Emerging Choreographers show is one of the few opportunities in Alberta that offers the luxury of not dealing with the administration required to put on the show.

All three of this year's choreographers have studied dance techniques and composition both at Grant MacEwan and across Canada. Their work is technically sophisticated and their voices are original and intelligent.

Each choreographer will be supplying solos and duets, supplemented with dancers James Vivieros (Alvarados) and Danielle Always (Onufreychuk). Todd will be presenting her piece, Triptych, with dancers Jody Vanderkerkhov and Allyn Embree.

Exquisite quality

Todd's dancing is a lesson in articulate and sensual physicality. Her choreography retains exquisite quality with a palpable intelligence.

Triptych is just that: three dances that began life in various places. At Dirty Feet's first production, Todd created a piece with a fish (dead) and an angel (live) that was a study for Triptich. Combined with a previous solo and a new piece, Triptych was born.

The inspiration for the piece?

"A pair of pajamas I found at Value Village," says Todd.

Okay: a fish, an angel and a pair of pajamas. But what's it really about?

"I'm interested in the use of symbols," says Todd. "The fish has many: a symbol for Christ, a symbol of self, a symbol of women, Pisces — the union of opposites. It's a search for the self. A coming into being."

Smells like Carl Jung to me, and indeed Todd used his book, Aion, for research.

Todd claims this will be her last commitment in Edmonton for a while. "I'd like to go back to school and take the dance program at U of C. I want to keep exploring the path of choreography. It's what intrigues me." ●

Four Rooms quartet just plain weird

CINEMA ReVUE
BY CHAUNCEY FEATHERSTONE

Ted the bellhop is covering the New Year night shift alone.

Allison Anders, Alexandre Rockwell, Robert Rodriguez and Quentin Tarantino conspired to write and direct this foursome of shorts. They agreed on a central character, a locale and a theme — and went wieeeerd.

A sympathetic audience would include cabbies, doughnut-shop waitresses and psychward nurses. As weird and laughable as it is, they would agree that reality can be this unreal.

A coven of witches gathers in "The Honeymoon Suite" to lift the 30-year-old curse on the woman who would be their goddess. For their concoction, only one significant ingredient is missing. In stumbles Ted.

Drunken party

A garbled request from a drunken party sends Ted and a bucket of ice to "The Wrong Room." There he comes between a couple who may or may not be playing out a naughty sex fantasy.

A couple decides at the last minute that their kids would hamper the good time they plan for that night. Ted, by now wary, reluctantly becomes "The Babysitter."

Arguably the best of the aggregate, Ted discovers how genuinely dangerous a sister and brother accusing each other of smelly feet are.

At last Ted gets called to the penthouse by "The Man From Hollywood." True, the list of items on his cart might be construed as odd. And the guy in the bedroom on the phone to his wife is having a helluva time. And the sandwich belongs to the woman who's migrated from "The Wrong Room."

The suite shows signs of a boisterous party winding down. The host is convivial. It's recognizable, it's rational. It can't last.

The detailed setting and cinematography catches the old hotel midway in its fall from luxurious to fleabag.

The cast consists of Antonio Banderas, Marisa Tomei, Madonna, Jennifer Beals, Bruce Willis and Tarantino himself, among others.

It's funny their agents allowed it. A lot of Hollywood names appear in a movie that could probably have done as well artistically without them. The happy surprise is the directing team skillfully avoids a weak actor's flaws or draws upon the dormant and ignored skill that got a strong character actor to Hollywood in the first place.

Tim Roth twitches Ted the bellhop though the most intriguing character arc. Personally, I think he goes stark ravingly, rip roaringly, screamingly sane.

Giggle yourself a favor, I could be wrong. ●

Schlesinger dangerously bland

FILM ReVUE
BY CHAUNCEY FEATHERSTONE

Does anyone recall Sally Field ever bearing a weapon in anything?

No? Then it's finally happened. The Flying Nun has fallen from grace.

Field plays Karen McCann, a career woman and suburban mom. In preparing for her youngest daughter's birthday, she gets caught up in traffic.

She calls home, converses with then listens to her older daughter being murdered over the cell phone.

The scene is sensational, and that's not meant in a good way.

The story's action is centred on McCann's rebuilding after the killer is released on a grossly oversimplified technicality. She fights with her husband (Ed Harris), reconciles with her remaining daughter and maintains membership in a victims of violence support group.

The support group has been infiltrated by a secret vigilante justice organization which trains tortured victims into assassins. McCann discovers them and enlists their aid.

The premise is sound. Plenty of grey in it to explore dramatically and intellectually.

Eye for an Eye has the simple recipe of a mud pie and the texture of yogurt. This picture is more dangerous than those of the Mike Holblooms and Robert Mapplethorpes of the world. It's simplistic and ignorable and blends easily into the social consciousness. You needn't wonder how stupid ideas proliferate, you just have to stay awake during their transmission.

John Schlesinger directed a bland movie.

Except for two exceptionally detailed rape and murder scenes.

It's like Schlesinger is saying, "I could have been a serial killer, but I went into film arts instead."

Is vigilante justice ever justifiable?

According to Eye for an Eye, it is.

But this movie — John Schlesinger especially — isn't qualified to pose the question. ●

Black comedies rule

CINEMA ReVUE
BY DAVE JACKSON

To get an idea of Reckless, imagine It's a Wonderful Life gone wrong.

This surreal "Alice in Winter Wonderland" adventure is based on the stage play of the same name by Craig Lucas.

It would have been hard to imagine this twisted odyssey adapted successfully for the screen had it not been for Mia Farrow, who plays her character (Rachel) flawlessly.

Brilliant performances are turned in from every member of the cast in this dark and offbeat comedy. Standouts would have to include Eileen Brennan (as a nun and hobbyist psychiatrist) who'll have you in convulsions as she acts out the world's greatest tragedy — birth.

Stephen Dorff, as Rachel's long-lost son, presents a heartwarming scene that puts the whole film back in Jimmy Stewart perspective.

The camera retreats back out a window over a snow-covered landscape one calm and tranquil Christmas Eve.

Also combining black comedy with a bittersweet love story is the German film, Nobody Loves Me.

"A woman over 30 is more likely to get hit by an A-bomb than to find a man."

Or so the shy and cynical Fanny Fink (brilliantly played by actress Maria Schrader) believes in delightful black comedy.

We are treated to a fresh and very real urban portrait of how truly bright, successful, enterprising women throw away all they have achieved in their compulsive quests to find a man.

Director Doris Dorrie has created a poignant metaphor for modern-day Germany. She feels her country's future is dependent on its ability to come to terms with its past while integrating multiculturalism in order to move forward.

This well-crafted film ponders the concept, "The past is a skeleton that walks behind you. And the future is a skeleton that walks ahead of you." ●

Two films by Brazilian Master Nelson Pereira Dos Santos. 7:30 p.m.: BARREN LIVES (VIDAS SECAS) (1963) A peasant family treks from the drought-stricken north to the urban south. 8:30 p.m.: HOW TASTY WAS MY LITTLE FRENCHMAN (1971) "A strange and comical exploration of the moral dimensions of cannibalism in 16th century Brazil." (Jan. 26-27)

a MINUTE at the MOVIES by Todd James

FENTURA 2: WHEN NATURE John Carrey follows up his [illegible] of hits (Dumb and Dumber, Mask and Ace Ventura, Pet Detective) with the obligatory sequel. Carrey can't sustain the [illegible] for a full 90 minutes, especially in the absence of a decent supporting cast. (VV)

FATHER OF THE BRIDE, PART II Steve Martin is back as the single-minded George Banks in this sequel to the 1991 hit, itself a remake of the 1950 Spencer Tracy film. You certainly won't hurt yourself laughing too hard, but the chuckles are plentiful. (VVV)

GOLDENEYE The new James Bond, played by Pierce Brosnan (Remington Steele), offers nothing [illegible] than the classic Bond style, charm and devil-may-care attitude and an assurance to fans of Ian Fleming's cold warrior that the 33-year-old franchise is in good hands into the next century. (VVV)

GRUMPIER OLD MEN Walter Matthau and Jack Lemmon return as Max Goldman and John Gustafson in this sequel to the surprise 1993 hit. John is now happily married to Ariel (Ann Margret) and Max continues his bachelor life of TV dinners, fishing and aggravating John when a vivacious newcomer (Sophia Loren) turns their favorite bait shop into an Italian restaurant. This is easily as funny as the original and the addition of Loren is a welcome one. (VVV)

HEAT This drama is spellbinding fare from screenwriter, producer and director Michael Mann (The Last of the Mohicans, Manhunter, Miami Vice). Al Pacino and Robert De Niro star as two intense personalities on opposite sides of the law. The robberies and gunfights are just a backdrop for the stellar performances of Pacino and De Niro. (VVVV)

MR. HOLLAND'S OPUS In one of his best performances in years, Richard Dreyfuss plays Glenn Holland, a musician with a passionate love for music and a dream to compose his own opus. To support his expectant wife (Glenn Headley), Holland takes on what he thinks will be a temporary job as a high school music teacher. That gig turns into a 30-year stay and Holand's opus and his relationship with his hearing-impaired son is pushed to the back of the closet. Yes, this movie can be hokey. But with Dreyfuss conducting, this is one sweet symphony. (VVVV)

NIXON Make no mistake, this is Oliver Stone's Richard M. Nixon, a highly compelling three-hour-plus film that's short on facts and heavy on hearsay and conjecture. Anthony Hopkins plays the 37th president with eerie accuracy, once you get used to the fact that Hopkins neither looks nor sounds like the man dubbed "Tricky Dicky." The rest of the cast is spectacular. (VVV)

SABRINA Harrison Ford and Julia Ormond star in this contemporary remake of Billy Wilder's 1954 romantic comedy starring Humphrey Bogart. Sabrina is a completely charming fairy-tale romance that retains many of the highlights from the original. (VVVV)

SENSE AND SENSIBILITY Emma Thompson's first stab at screenwriting is a roaring success as she tackles Jane Austen's funny and passionate 1811 story of women in search of love and inherited money. Sense and Sensibility is a rich melodrama with well-developed characters in the hands of director Ang Lee (Eat Drink Man Woman). Thompson's script is witty, subtle and funny. Given the gentle pace of the novel, Sense and Sensibility moves at a brisk pace. (VVVV)

TOM AND HUCK Jonathan Taylor Thomas (Home Improvement) stars as Tom Sawyer in this surprisingly accurate Disney portrayal of Mark Twain's classic. Tom and Huck genuinely captures life on the mighty Mississippi in the 1800s and the carefree, devil-may-care lifestyle of two young rascals. (VVV)

TOY STORY Disney's first full-length feature created entirely through the use of computer animation is remarkable. But the characters transcend all the high-tech wizardry and make Toy Story a magical, funny adventure. This is simply solid entertainment that uses the most awe-inspiring animation you've seen in a long while. (VVVV)

12 MONKEYS Terry Gilliam, the man behind Brazil, Time Bandits and The Fisher King directs this futuristic thriller that stars Bruce Willis as James Cole, an unwilling volunteer from the year 2035, sent back in time to gather information about a terrorist group which unleashed a virus virtually wiped out the world's population in 1996. Willis has a knack for making average movies better. He accomplishes that here, though "average" may not be the proper phrase for 12 Monkeys. In the end, though, this is a thinly-disguised run-of-the-mill chase movie. (VV)

TWO IF BY SEA If Sandra Bullock, one of the most popular actresses in the world, keeps turning up in lame offerings like The Net and this pointless comedy co-starring Dennis Leary, she will soon find her audience dwindling. (V)

WAITING TO EXHALE Forrest Whittaker's (The Crying Game, Bird) debut as a feature film director, this is an agonizingly slow, predictable and syrupy drama which follows the lives of four African-American friends (Whitney Houston, Angela Bassett, Lela Rochon, Loretta Devine) in their battles with the men, or lack thereof, in their lives. Despite fine performances all around, Waiting to Exhale fails to rise above being a two-hour soap opera on film. (V)

The Library gets an attitude

No birthday suits, please but wearing anything else at Tuxes, Tiles and Tales is hunky-dory.

BY CHAUNCEY FEATHERSTONE

"You can come in your tux, you can come in your leather jacket, you can come in any kind of clothing that suits you...," Edmonton's boss librarian Penny McKee pauses, then cautions, "As long as you're clothed..."

To the library? Well, yeah, sure, of course — anything goes. But also to Tuxes, Tiles and Tales, the alternative gala presented by The Edmonton Public Library.

The Library? An alternative gala? What gives? Cool by association — that's what. Over the past year, the Library has stepped out and strutted its stuff with a membership campaign geared to 18-35 year olds. Tuxes, Tiles and Tales is the culmination of the campaign and is meant to showcase all that's new and hip at the library.

Back in the salad '70s, things were so good the library board waived fees. By 1994, economic reality set in and a fee schedule was reintroduced . Accordingly, library membership and circulation dropped five to eight per cent.

In the Information Age, library management figured the 18-35 crowd was the one who needed to remember the library as a repository of information. And it ain't the morgue it used to be. The entertainment factor plays in.

Communications director Iolanni Domingo tells why: "If you don't change, you get swept along or swept aside or you disappear. The library's dilemma is, how much of the traditional role, the archival role, the collections role does it retain and how much of the new role does it assume before it gets swept away? The library's been around for a long time."

"Since Alexander, when he carried his 4000 books around on his 40 camels," adds McKee.

The burning of the library at Alexandria delayed humanity from curing cancer and exploring new solar systems by centuries. Overstatement? What does our panel of judges think?

If only Alexander had an espresso bar, Danielle Steele and a fire extinguisher.

"Something for everyone" is the motto to which most libraries subscribe. In Canada, public libraries were borne not of the book-chaining intelligentsia, but of the blue-collar Mechanics Institute."

So what is hot and new in the age of the microchip?

Magazines on-line are common stock in trade. Through the Freenet, patrons can browse the Internet. CDs, CD-ROMs and videos fill their own shelves. It has an espresso bar, Danielle Steele and central heating. It's new.

So what of us Neo-Luddites who enjoy frequenting the dark and quiet nooks and crannies among the stacks?

McKee soothes, "There's still places where you can come and do serious research and study. I just think we're beyond the 'shush' days."

The library's new young-at-heart attitude will be evident at Tuxes, Tiles and Tales. There'll be a fashion show (under those clothes, they're naked), a Scrabble tourney (try playing it naked) and a bullshit contest (wear boots), hence the name Tuxes, Tiles and Tales.

Scrabble? Ho-hum, you're thinking? Want to see a knife fight erupt in a seniors' residence on visiting day? Break out the boards. No tournament of this size has ever been organized in Edmonton, so there is no reigning champ yet. Who will it be? A Ph.D. in English or a retired farm wife?

Judges in the Tall Tale swap are Oilers GM Glen Sather, Sun publisher Craig Martin, Yuk Yuk's general manager Bill Medak and none other than the mayor, his Honourable "Smilin' Bill" Smith himself. Talk about your jury of peers.

Other attractions include a Baroque café, casino, silent auction, international cuisine and salsa entertainment by Tilo Paiz and his banda Amistad.

A great deal — tickets are just $25 and include a library membership or gift certificate for a library membership and an Edmonton Oilers hockey ticket to the Feb. 7 game against the Washington Capitals or the Feb. 14 game versus the Anaheim Mighty Ducks.

It's an active line, by george!

FASHION
BY RYAN GREENWOOD

Billed as this year's first alternative fashion gala, Tuxes, Tiles and Tales gives the public a first look at Scott George's new street wear, active line george.

Alongside other fashion headliners Concrete and Hallmark Garments, George decided to show his line here not strictly as a business decision but also has to support Edmonton.

"I chose this show because it's supporting the library. In a city where we need to be supportive of one another, a fundraiser like this is good for Edmonton and the fashion industry," explains George.

Both confident and nervous about the audience's reaction to the show, George is ready to show his line to a broader, more diversified audience.

"I'm a very big believer in constructive criticism. As much as someone is a designer they have to be able to sit back and listen to what the customer has to say about their creations," attests George.

With a fashion show geared at being more fun than anything, George is happy to be involved. "A lot of what I do when I'm designing clothes is nothing more than making people happy. If my designs can help others be more comfortable and have a positive influence on their lives, then that's probably nicer."

Not only is george making its big showing but Concrete will be previewing its spring line on Saturday night.

Feminine and pretty are the signature buzz words around the store when you ask about the new looks.

Immediately following the fashion show will be a Hair Fantasy show from Salon on Sixth, s is a real natural step for ys Schoenberg while mak-

She feels her music translates better to an electric medium. But she knows she'll have a hard time convincing some fans who only see her as a solo acoustic performer.

"That's put me in a sticky situation," she says. "There are many people who enjoyed me as a solo performer. The transition will be different for some fans."

Schoenberg and her bandmates will embark on a three-week tour of Western Canada after the curtain falls on the Rev gig.

Schoenberg received her electric baptism jamming out at the '94 Folk Festival's post-show party. A few strangers walked up and started jamming away with her.

"These guys came up to me and I thought it would be fun. I was shocked. I didn't know what the guys in Blue Rodeo looked like, so I didn't really know it was them when we started."

Sure enough, a jam with Canada's fave country-rock act had Schoenberg hooked.

Now, she just has to get promoters on the bandwagon. Schoenberg she had a hard time getting the band gigs at so-called "alternative" clubs because of her reputation as an acoustic-type.

"I've experienced the reinvention of the wheel in every sense. I've walked into clubs and before I can say anything they say 'no, you're not right for this place.'

"I've had to reinvent my reputation. It's a real challenge. But now, we're getting those gigs at the Rebar, the Rev..."

Schoenberg is one of the freshest faces on the Edmonton scene. But if she's worried about getting gigs, she could go a long way to changing her image by getting her nose pierced and dyeing her hair green.

"And most of it is natural, although I have to admit some of it has been forced on my part because I don't like to feel myself going over the same ground that I have before."

Still, he is quick to point out there are certain threads that connect the music together.

"Basically, all the music is still coming from the same mind, just with all the little evolutions that have taken place over the last number of years."

One of the most important of those evolutions was the release of ...But You Can Call Me Larry in 1993, an album he considers a watershed of sorts.

Dividing line

"For me, the Larry album was the most dramatic change. I really see it as being the dividing line between what I was doing in the '80s and what I'm doing now."

What he's doing now is touring to promote The Good Catches Up.

Recorded at producer Eddie Schwartz's Toronto home studio, the new album not only continues where the last album left off in terms of sound and style, he explains it also ties in some of the more intense subject matter of his earlier material, especially on songs like "Guns and God."

It also continues the songwriting partnershiop with Schwartz that began in 1990 with the song "All the Lovers In the World." Gowan says it's a partnership that works largely because of the creative friction that still exists between the two.

"We both kind of bring out the best in each other," he says.

"And sometimes not by the most pleasant means. We can be quite critical of each other's work, which can be a really good thing."

Gary McGowan's PROfiles

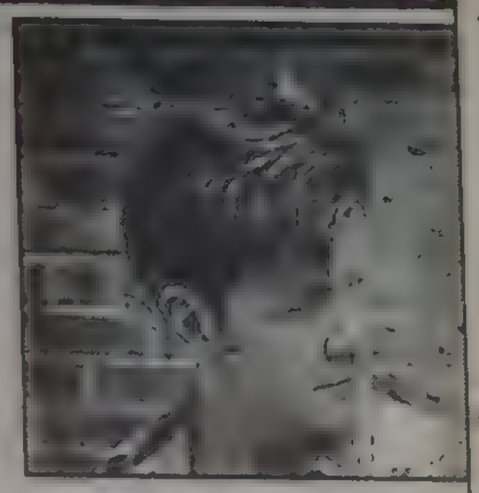
Notoriety: Guitar player extraordinaire, but first and foremost "I'm a songwriter."

Next Gig: Jan. 30 at The Sidetrack Cafe.



Bobby Cameron

Favorite color: Black.

Most important thing ever learned: Be who you really are.

Quote: "Leap and the net will appear."

Epitaph: A guy who wanted his songs to make a difference.

Favorite drink: Coffee.

Memorable school experience: I had "big rock hair" when I was in Grade 12. So, I'm walking to the front of the auditorium in my graduation gown to pick up my diploma and the mayor of my hometown (Port Hawksbury, Nova Scotia) started whistling at me. He found the long hair thing hilarious and, after he started whistling, so did everybody else... everybody but me.

First album bought: Electric Jewels, by April Wine.

Home: I was the baby of the family and grew up with lots of older brothers and sisters. I was really looked after and that sort of environment still means home to me.

Sign: Sagittarius.

Influences: My father, Bruce Springsteen and Mark Knopfler.

What makes you happy: A night like my CD release party. The angels showed up, pushed all the buttons and I could do no wrong.

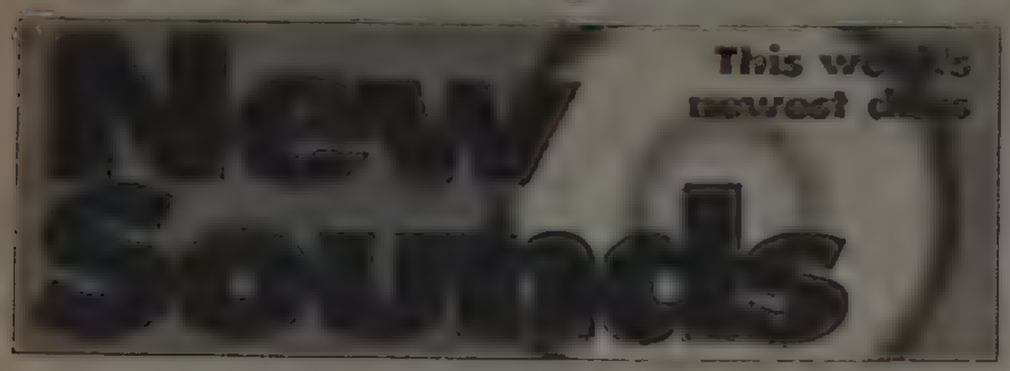
New Wayne Shorter CD worth the wai



WAYNE SHORTER
High Life
(Verve)

It's been nine years since Wayne Shorter's last recording and High Life proves the wait was worth it. The lush, majestic sound signals the saxophonist's return to Weather Report-styled compositions.

No doubt, much of the credit goes to producer and bass player Marcus Miller.

He brings to the proceedings the warm orchestration and funky backbeat of Miles Davis's mid-'80s recordings.

Of course, it helps if you have some first-rate talent for backing musicians. Shorter's tapped some of the more original players around.

They include Lost Tribe guitarist David Gilmore; and John Scofield alumna, drummer Teri Lyne Carrington.

The compositions are certain and neatly understated, the work of someone who has nothing to prove and plenty to say.

The recording is full of contrasts, from the joyous finish of "At The Fair" to the brooding "Maya."

High Life is a satisfyingly mature album, optimistic and rejuvenating. It topped my "best of" list for 1995.

ALABAMA
In Pictures
(RCA)

I think these good ole boys should take their money and retire already. I was sitting at my computer trying to think of a word that would describe Alabama's music and all I could come up with was "dorky."

These four would have been the perfect guests on the old Hee Haw, you know, jumping up and down in that thar corn patch and telling bad jokes about inbreeding. For the most part, this album has a lot of square dancing music on it — the kind of music you doe-see-doe to, madly pumping your elbows while trying not to choke on the piece of straw sticking out of your teeth.

And the rest of the album is pretty much a rehash of the tunes that made them famous in the 80's. An honourable mention goes to "I've Loved a Lot More Than I've Hurt," which has a little touch of ragtime that makes it worth listening to.

Amy Hough

SON VOLT
Trace
(Warner)

There was once a band called Uncle Tupelo, who wrote pretty damn good hard-drinkin' country music, 'cept it was produced with a punk rock aesthetic. It was the kind of stuff that wouldn't turn heads if it got played at The Rev — but it would also be welcomed by a group of drunk VLT gamblers during a Saturday night piss-up at the Morinville Zoo.

You could toss them in with the almighty Reverend Horton Heat, Southern Culture on the Skids, the Palace Brothers, the Silver Jews, Royal Trux et. al. and call this subgenre "alternative country and western."

Uncle Tupelo broke up in '93 — but charter member Jay Farrar returned with his new band, Son Volt, and a stunning whiskey-soaked release. It's a rare form of country-rock. It's not bathed in arena-rock clichés, a la Garth Brooks. No, this is the kind of stuff that would have ol' Hank beaming from the gates of heaven, thanking creation someone finally realized country wasn't created for AOR yuppies; it was created for the skids sitting at the bar on a lonely Saturday night.

Farrar proves he is a rare breed — a country songwriter who isn't willing to make formula records. If that leads the critics to call him a punk rocker instead, so be it.

Is Son Volt punk, rock or country? It doesn't matter. Fans of each of the genres will miss out if they pass up on this record.

Steven Sandor

TONY BENNETT
Here's to the Ladies
(Sony)

Ice up the Dom Perignon and drink in this 18-cut ode to the great songwriters of the early to mid-20th century. Bennett, in choosing music made famous by practically all dead songstresses of the big band to lounge era, transports listeners on a journey that is timeless.

He can sensuously turn a phrase to "Poor Butterfly," or snap fingers in "Tangerine." Sticking with his Ralph Sharon Trio — with whom he has recorded his last few Grammy-winning CDs with — the album veers from very quiet tunes to full-orchestrated and big-sounding numbers. Meticulous production and seamless crooning by a performer loving what he sings, this CD should have been nominated for a Grammy.

Paul Compassi

CADILLAC BILL & THE CREEPING BENT
Dining Out
(Rat)

After listening to the latest offering from the self-dubbed purveyors of "Dada-billy" I am reminded of Robert Gordon if he had the good sense to join DEVO.

Or, if Jonathan Richman had a sex-change operation, to turn him into a real man, and ended up fronting the Lounge Lizards.

Cadillac Willie & The Creeping Cruds are equal parts Daddy-O and Revenge of the Nerds. Cool-Jerk, if you will.

As a contestant on American Bandstand's Rate-A-Record, I would be forced to say, "Well Dick, it's got a good beat and you can laugh at it."

This record would have made the perfect soundtrack to the Brad Pitt film Johnny Suede: Ultra-hip with a comedic sense of denial. "Thirteen Women" is a post-apocalyptic scenario where Caddy Bill is the only man left in a town full of women. It is the best male-chauvinist fantasy song since "Surf City." "Saturday Night At The Laundromat" highlights the downside of the single-white-male syndrome ("Won't you please give generously").

As I straighten my hair and leave the men's restroom, I feel cool as all of the women stare at me, even though I am fully aware that there is a trail of toilet paper hanging out the butt of my jeans.

Adrian Lackey

PAM TILLIS
All of This Love
(Arista)

Pam Tillis has a very high-pitched whine to her voice that usually limits my listening to only 15 minutes at a stretch (I feel there might be some auditory damage going on).

She is one of the few female country stars, like Carlene Carter and Mary Chapin Carpenter, that seems to have fun with their music showing a sense of humor and inner strength. This album is far from being one of her best, but like most of Tillis's albums there are a couple of songs that stand out being so much better than the rest.

"You Can't Have A Good Time Without Me" is a sultry swing tune that tones down Tillis's voice, displaying it at its musical best.

"Betty's Got A Bass Boat" is a humorous look at a formerly dateless girl who gets herself a big screen TV, a satellite dish and a fishing boat and now has a whole string of guys towing along.

I knew I was doing something wrong.

Amy Hough

THE DROWNED
If Happiness Is Water
Independent

Almost-electrified folk from Saskatoon - four sincere young folks, including a fiddler who pretty much donates the trademark to the band's sound - sort of like Edmonton's own Cactus Gang. They're quite good, even if the lead vocalist's nasal snarl becomes wearing by the fourth song.

This is demo-cassette-quality sound and performance on a CD - have manufacturing costs finally come down enough for this?

Georges Giguere

KID RAMOS
Two Hands One Heart
(Black Top)

Kid Ramos, sometime guitarist with the Fabulous Thunderbirds, manages to squeeze some life out of a generally over-produced CD. In the midst of all the bells and whistles, the producers at least had the good sense to push Ramos' rough 'n' ready playing to the fore.

He's a muscular player, skipping the soul in favor of a punishing sound. Ramos originally learned his chops with harp player James Harmon, before going on to work with Roomful of Blues. So the Kid comes by his blues honestly.

Some sidemen stand out here. Spyder Mittleman provides some sweet sax solos, while Fred Kaplan's got the juke-joint sound down pat. Despite an uninspired rhythm section, Ramos storms through "Done Deal," an original, before settling into B.B. King's "Baby, Take A Look At You."

Yet, in spite of the party-time atmosphere, this debut offers little to distinguish it over other blues LPs. Ramos' shuffles and Chicago-style blues are ultimately generic.

WILLIE NELSON
Revolutions of Time...the Journey 1975–1993
(Sony)

Before I even knew who Willie Nelson was, I have memories of Patsy Cline singing "Crazy" and a songwriting credit on a Jerry Jeff Walker album.

And once a friend had introduced me to an early Nelson recording and I was acquainted with his nasal voice and uncharacteristic jazz phrasing, I would hear him again in unlikely places. Jimmy Dawkins singing the blues to a dismal audience in Red Deer made "the night life ain't no good life, but it's my life" seem entirely à propos.

It still took me years to realize that Willie is a whiz on that beat-up old gut string of his. Hell, the man can even make a taco commercial sound good.

This package chronicles his many years with Columbia, greatest hits restricted to one label. Now, with other C&W artists of his generation, concentrating on later, more "successful" periods might mean the collection would be fatally weakened by its omissions.

However, though many of the classics that appear on "...and Then I Wrote" or Rhino's Classic and Unreleased box set are missing, Willie is one of those artists who has matured like a fine wine, and songs as recent as 1992's "Still is Still Moving to are still vital pieces of work.

He has also, as is apparent the selections on the second sung duets with everybody and dawg — and I venture to say haven't missed one pairing. blame anyone else, he sang 'em, he picked 'em.

From selling the rights to his songs for a dollar and a dime, to relatively recent fights with the life's highway hasn't been wi the odd stretch of gravel for W Nelson and his gypsy family, and three discs, entitled Pilgrimage, journs and Exodus, document a those country and not so cou miles.

Did I mention you get a great booklet with bio-story, personnel, timonials, and 35 tiny album co reproductions?

This collection demands that stand up and be counted, but by he's as American and alive an ins tion as Jerry Garcia and the D were.

DAMON & NAOMI
The Wondrous World of Damon Naomi
(Sub Pop)

Guitarist/drummer Damon Krukow and bassist Naomi Yang were thirds of seminal '80s guitar warb Galaxie 500.

Along with Wayne Kramer jury is still out if the weird-so aficionado actually even bothe turning a knob. What came ou Galaxie 500 was wonderful, but dy, music), the band explored aesthete of guitar-jangle, while D Wareham's New England drawl barely be heard in the mix.

After the split-up of 500, W ham chose to worship the V Underground with his new (and going strong) band, Luna.

Damon & Naomi's post-500 reers has seen the duo become introspective. The Wondrous W of... doesn't have much to do guitar-spangles and occasional d of feedback. Even though the album sees Kramer doing the prod tion work, co-writing songs and p ing guitar and mellotron, The W drous World of... is really a glor folk record.

Tracks like "The New Historic and "Forgot to Get High" are insta appealing — but aren't bits of w drous pop music. This is fine acous stuff.

But will it have a long shelf l Even though I liked it the first 'round, I get the feeling this is a candidate for a trade-in at the u record shop the next time I'll nee couple of bucks. Nice to have, b won't miss it, either.

CARLY SIMON
Clouds in My Coffee
(BMG)

The title of the three-CD highlig package can be ascribed to that watercolor painting.

Her songs are little sketche life, pleasantly popped out. The closed booklet has an essay on proclivity, her notes to reasonin to why songs were recorded and p ty of pictures of cute Carly as a Once dubbed a "cynical social c mentator," her latest recording guish in pastel wonderings.

The Carly-smorg of 58 tunes broken down individually to Miscellaneous, and Unreleas the last one titled Cry Your Sleep. The Cry CD isn't such a d er after all, just nicely recorded lads. All cuts have been remaste and as liner notes trumpet, an haustive search was made to ge original masters. It's a pleasant b and flowers historical packa melodic pop.

The Regina Guild of Folk Arts is now accepting submissions from folk-based groups and performers for consideration to the 1996 Regina Folk Festival. By folk we mean traditional folk, acoustic blues, bluegrass, worldbeat (for lack of a better term) and any other styles that would fit into a family oriented music festivity, including children's performers. The 1996 Regina Folk Festival happens on June 22 & 23 on the lush, tree laden grounds of downtown Regina's Victoria Park. Ours is a smallish event with average attendance at 5,000-8,000 over the weekend and is recognized for its intimacy and excitement. Send tapes, cd's, bio, etc by Jan 31 to: 1996 Regina Folk Festival, Box 1203, Regina, Sask. [illegible]

Women Seeking Men

This is Kathleen. I'm 5'2" tall with brown hair & brown eyes. I'm the single parent of two children. I like dining in or out, movies, cuddling on the couch, going for long walks, driving around in my car, the mountains & camping. I'm learning how to play pool & I like going out to the clubs every once in a while & dancing. I'm a non-smoker & a social drinker. I'm looking for long term relationship with a man 33-47 yrs. old who is warm, caring, affectionate & most of all, very honest & not into head games at all. Box 4527.

I'm a 29 yr. old, 5'6" tall, single female with a medium build, light brown hair & green eyes. I enjoy fishing, camping, white water rafting, tobogganing & much more. I'm looking for an honest, sincere, one-woman man who enjoys all of the above as well as quiet evenings cuddling in front of a fire, country music & dancing. You are professionally employed, a social drinker, a smoker & you know what you want. I have one dependent & enjoy doing a lot of family things so it is necessary that you like children & enjoy doing things as a family. I have a great sense of humour & I'm not shy. Box 4808.

Do you ever find yourself a little sad that you're cooking dinner for one again? Or you're watching a movie by yourself? Do you ever get sick of your friends telling you about this really great person they really think you should meet? Do you like sports, movies & dining out? Do you lead a fairly quiet lifestyle? Do you find yourself laughing your head off at Wings or Seinfeld? Do you ever wish that you could meet a lady 35 yrs. old, 5'2" tall, 140 lbs. with shoulder length, reddish brown hair & blue eyes who's fairly busy & independent, works full-time & goes to school? A girl who has no dependents but still hopes that could happen one day. If you're a gentleman around my age who answered yes to most of the above, call me at Box 1367.

It's Friday night & to my chagrin, I'm home alone. My kids say it's time to go out & have some fun but I'm shy & really don't remember how. I'm 41 yrs. old, but look a lot younger. I have hazel/green eyes & long auburn hair. I have a good sense of humour & I would like to share it with you. I'm looking for a stable man who has a good job. Someone who's patient & understanding. He should also be under 6' tall as I'm only 5'3" tall. If you would like to talk, please box me. Box 4272.

My name is Reena. I'm professionally employed & I enjoy many things like movies, dining out, dancing & most of the usual stuff. If you want to know more about me, please leave me a message. Box 5248.

This is Jenn. I'm 28 yrs. old, 5'5" tall with light blue eyes, reddish brown hair, freckles & dimples. I'm well-educated, employed, well-travelled, well-read, spontaneous, sensual, erotic, passionate & I love both reading & writing poetry. I'm also very passionate about music. I would like to meet someone who's outgoing, spontaneous & employed. Children are welcome. Someone who's looking for friendship first & will welcome anything that follows. I have so much more to tell you so if you leave me a message, I'll be able to do that. Box 7082.

I'm an old-fashioned, energetic, loving, caring lady. I'm looking to meet a guy for friendship & a possible relationship. He must be strong, confident, taller & have pride in his appearance & all that he says & does. He would enjoy long walks, quiet talks, the occasional evening out on the town & weekend away from the city. If you feel this is you & would like to find out more about this 30 yr. old, 5'5" tall, slim, employed female with blonde hair & blue eyes, please leave me a message. Box 6760.

I'm 42 yrs. old, 5'3" tall, 115 lbs. with shoulder length, blonde curly hair & blue green eyes. I'm looking for a long term relationship with a gentleman 35-50 yrs. old with a small to medium build. I'm an old-fashioned girl who likes to be treated like a lady. I have two teenagers at home with me who come first in my life. In my spare time I'm involved in amateur theatre. I'm also interested in movies, dancing & quiet times with that special someone. My taste in music leans to classic rock, light rock & the blues. I'm a smoker but seldom drink. I'm not athletically inclined. I'm professionally employed & work mostly night shift. I'm a very honest, caring & sincere person & I'm looking for the same in a man. I'm not into head games or the bar scene. If this interests you, please leave me a message. Serious replies only please.Box 6841.

My name is Melissa. I'm 26 yrs. old, 5'7" tall with a slender build, shoulder length brown hair & brown eyes. I'm looking for a gentleman who knows what the term old-fashioned values means. You must be an animal lover, secure with yourself, honest, trustworthy, caring, sensitive & be able to show your feelings. I really need someone to help me find that light at the end of the tunnel & show me that it really does exist. Box 5027.

I'm 39 yrs. old, 5'6" tall with long brown hair & Hazel eyes. I'm a single parent. I'm employed full-time & I'm looking for someone to share my life with. If you are honest, caring, easygoing & like children, then maybe you should give me a call. I enjoy movies, cooking, dinner out, dancing & all types of music. I'm a smoker & a very light social drinker. I'm not into head games. Give me a call & maybe we can get together for a cup of coffee. Box 3240.

My name is Bobbie. I'm 23 yrs. old, 5'7" tall, with dark hair & dark eyes. I'm a lighter woman. I'm looking for a long term friendship with someone who likes to go out & have fun. I'm down-to-earth, honest & sincere with good morals. I'm looking for a man 23-35 yrs. old who is honest, sincere & clean. Box 2662.

If you're looking for erotic telephone conversation or a long term relationship, press 3 now. For those of you still interested, my name is Laura. I'm an attached 21 yr. old female who is 5'7" tall, 120 lbs. I have a cocoa complexion, naturally tanned, physically fit & considered very attractive. I'm semi-attached & seeking a very discreet & intimate encounters. If you're interested, please leave me a message. Box 4974.

My name is Gina. I'm 26 yrs. old, 5'7" tall with long dirty blonde hair & brown eyes. I'm above medium build but I'm not large. I'm well-endowed, if you know what I mean. I've never been married & have no children. I'm spontaneous, outgoing & I like doing things on the spur of the moment. Get back to me. Box 4741.

My name is Debbie. I'm 40 yrs. old, divorced with no dependents. I'm 5'2" tall with dark blonde hair, green eyes & a medium build. I enjoy most spectator sports, especially hockey, football & baseball. I play on a slow-pitch team in the summer & golf a little. I enjoy long walks, movies, watching videos & reading. I also like to play board games & cards. I'm looking for a special man to spend time with. Preferably, he would be 38-48 yrs. old. If interested, call Box 5665.

My name is Tracy. I'm a 29 yr. old, single parent. I'm looking for a long, serious relationship. I realize that does take time to build but I'm willing to get to know the person first & see where it goes. I'm not into head games or one-night stands. I'm 5'8" tall with brown hair, brown eyes & a medium build. I've been told I'm attractive. I believe that I am but of course, that's in the eyes of the beholder. I like many different activities from dining in & out to movies, long walks & I'm just about game for anything. I'm looking for a sincere, honest male who's looking for the same things I am. Box 5837.

I'm Michelle. I'm 24 yrs. old, 5'9" tall with short brown/auburn hair & blue/green eyes. I'm curved where I need to be. I'm a smoker & casual drinker. I'm looking for somebody who I can go & have a coffee with or have a couple of drinks or maybe even go dancing as I like to dance. Box 6320.

My name is Donna. I'm looking for a long term relationship with a man I can trust. I'm looking for a man who's truthful & faithful. Someone I can spend quality time with. I like horseback riding & my favorite pastime is dancing. My taste in music leans to the rock of the 60's & 70's. If interested, please leave me a message. Box 6319.

I'm a divorced mother with one child. I have blonde hair & blue eyes. I'm a non-smoker & I'm employed. I'm interested in meeting a man who's employed, not into drinking or drugs & interested in a long term relationship. Box 5311.

This is Susan. I'm in my mid 40's, full-bodied, 5'2" tall with brown eyes. I used to have dark brown hair but now I'm becoming a blonde & I don't mean from the bottle. I'm a smoker & social drinker. I'm the single parent of two, one of which is still at home. I wish to meet a gentleman 40-40 yrs. old with a good sense of humour, is a believer, kind, honest & sincere. You should like dancing, camping & spending time with family & friends as they are very important to me. I enjoy quiet times as well. As to your looks, lack of hair is not a problem but you must have some weight on your bones. You can't be a sports fanatic. I like a beard or moustache but it's not a necessity. If you wish to meet for coffee, call Box 5271.

My name is Cora Lee. I'm 22 yrs. old, 5'9" tall, 120 lbs. with blonde hair & blue eyes. I'm looking for a caring, loving person who loves to go camping & having a good time. If interested, call Box 8770.

I'm a soon to be 29 yr. old, 5'9" tall with a medium build & the mother of two. If my hair colour is important, it's dark blonde. My eyes are my strong point & they are blue & captivating. I have a very nice smile. I'm honest & sincere with a great personality & a wacky sense of humour. I'm looking for a taller, average to good looking, man who is around my age. Someone who likes to spend time doing a lot of outdoor activities & is preferably a country boy or farm boy type personality. I'm a very fun-loving & people oriented person but I'm shy & reserved when meeting new people. I don't have to be wined & dined but I would like to be romanced & on intimate terms with the right person. Box me back to find out more about me. Box 6165.

My name is Tracy. I'm 5'5" tall with brown hair & blue eyes. Box 1905.

My name is Mary Jane. I'm 5'2" tall with a medium build. I'm a non-smoker, financially secure, positive, independent & happy person. I love all winter & summer sports, especially cross-country skiing & camping. I'm also spontaneous & willing to try new adventures. I would like to meet someone 39-44 yrs. old who's a non-smoker, physically active, has a sense of humour & enjoys life. He would be willing to be a friend first. Box 6620.

Men Seeking Women

I'm 21 yrs. old, 6'4" tall with brown hair, green eyes & a medium sized build. I'm into all kinds of sports like hockey, football, baseball, mountain biking. I'm pretty athletically fit. I'm looking for a lady who's into some good company & a possible relationship. Preferably she would be over 5'7" tall. If you're interested, call me back. Box 2968.

This may sound sucky but it must be said. I'm looking for a meaningful, long term relationship that is built on warmth, caring, consideration, respect, love & friendship. Those who want to be spoiled or want a sugar daddy, press 3. I still have that innocence of heart & require the same. I'm 42 yrs. old, employed, a romantic who has never married, a good communicator, slim & over 5'9" tall. I've had a lot of hobbies & interests over the years & would like to expand my horizons & seek adventure in a new relationship with new thoughts, activities & a new beginning. A slim woman late 20's to 30's would be preferable. One or two dependents is OK. Box 4332.

I'm Don. I'm 34 yrs. old, 6'2" tall, 190 lbs. with two kids & I live on a farm. I'm looking for someone who wants to be hard working & loving at night. Someone who likes to play a lot. I like skidooing & the outdoors. I have a big yard with lots of things to do here & lots of things to keep someone happy. Looking for someone who wants to have fun & do all kinds of good things. Box 6100.

I'm 27 yr. old, single, white male 5'10" tall, 175 lbs. with a pretty good build & working on it. I have shorter brown hair, greenish gray eyes, a moustache & I'm actually attractive, believe it or not. I'm also very mature, reasonably intelligent & extremely straight forward & honest. I'm looking for a casual relationship. Friends definitely, lovers probably & more possibly. The lady I'm looking for should be 20-33 yrs. old, slim, attractive, very honest & very straightforward. That's important. She'd be adventurous, spontaneous, open-minded & fun with a good sense of humour. If this is you, I would love to hear from you. Take a chance. Box 1811.

This country boy now living in the city is 26 yrs. old, 5'9" tall, 165 lbs. with blue eyes & dirty blond hair is out there looking for a good old, redneck, country girl. (laughter here). I'm just a fun loving kind of guy. I like to be with people who enjoy laughing & like getting out. I'm into country music but I like rock & roll as well & I don't limit myself to just one thing. I'm currently a student in the pursuit of carpentry. I've met quite a few pretty decent people in this town but I haven't met that special girl yet so I'm out there looking to see what I can find. Get back to me. Box 7463.

Have you ever driven down the highway & actually glanced into another vehicle & seen a blond, blue eyed gentleman driving? Have you ever wondered what it would be like sitting next to him, going to wherever he's going? If you have, read on. My name is Dean. I'm a 5'7" tall gentleman with a medium build, blond hair & blue eyes. I'm looking for someone to go for a drink with, shoot some pool & maybe have a candlelight dinner or even go horseback riding or taking that long drive to wherever the road takes us. If you're interested, box me back. Box 3238.

You've been searching for how long? Well, search no longer. After 34 years in the making, he is here. At 5'7" tall, 177 lbs., this svelte frame comes equipped with short but thick brown hair accented with just a touch of gray & reflective hazel/green eyes with long lashes while a short, cropped moustache provides just a touch of class to a generous, adventurous & intelligent individual. This person is at his best when accompanied by an athletic, professional lady 27-38 yrs. old. She's energetic, intellectual & sincere. If you have these qualities & are looking for a long term relationship, call me. Box 5794.

This 40 yr. old gentleman is looking for that someone special to develop a long term relationship with. If you're into head games, please press 3. My name is Rob. I'm a single parent & have custody of my children. I have a very busy lifestyle but I do make time for myself. I enjoy my life but would like to share it with someone special. I believe in trust, honesty, commitment, equality & I'm secure enough within myself to show & express my feelings. I'm looking for an intelligent woman in her 30's who has a slim to medium build. Hopefully, this woman will like children as my kids are a big part of my life. I'm not looking for a mother figure though. I'm 5'11" tall with a stocky build & participate in many different sports & social activities. I'm not into the bar scene, drugs or one-night stands. I'm a smoker & light social drinker. If you consider yourself to be a mature woman & not afraid to put forth the effort that it takes to make a relationship work, then I would be pleased to hear from you. Box 6033.

My name is Tim. I'm 44 yrs. old, divorced with no dependents. I'm getting myself re-established. I enjoy pool, darts, bowling, a good book, cuddling on the couch & spend time with friends. I enjoy going out for the occasional drink. I don't smoke myself but I have no problems with those who do, as long as it doesn't get in my face. I'd just like to get to know you & have an opportunity to have a coffee with you. Why don't you box me. Box 5816.

This 26 yr. old driver seeks a 1960-1977 foreign or domestic in good condition. I like a body that's built for speed but I can still appreciate comfort & quality. I know how to handle a stick shift even though I do grind the gears sometimes. I'm an excellent driver & if a car handles well, I'll drive it all night long. If you're tired of sitting in the garage & you'd like to go for a test drive with this attractive, slim male with dark hair & eyes, call Box 1826.

My name is Maxwell. I'm wondering if you can help me. I'm 5'7" tall, clean-shaven with short brown hair, bluish green eyes & I'm a shy guy. I'm also a non-smoker & social drinker. I have many interests & hobbies both indoors & outdoors including biking, camping, hiking, movies, most music & dining out. This is where you can help. I'm looking for a female who might be interested in a friendship or possibly a long term relationship. If you know of anyone like that, get a hold of me. Box 8430.

Are you looking for a knight in shining armor or a guy with old-fashioned values? If so, read on. My name is Darren. I'm a 31 yr. old, 6'1" tall, 210 lb. single, white male. I believe in friends first & foremost. That's what I'm looking for, at least to start with. I'm interested in country music, dancing, volleyball, movies & pool. I like to spend quiet, romantic times on the couch talking about anything & everything & an afternoon at a ball game. I also can enjoy a weekend roughing it in the woods. Being self-employed has made me honest, independent, innovative & flexible. I'm passionate about my work, my life & my friends as all are very important to me. If an adventurous, two way friendship is what you want & you're under 35 yrs. old, over 5'5" tall, with a slim athletic build, no dependents & like some or all of the people I am, call Box 8741.

How many guys do you have to choose from on this system? 100? 200? 300? Here's one that's a little different. Some, I imagine are unethical, not honest & others are unattractive but I like to think that most of us are just unlucky in love. The trouble with myself is that that I can't find dates just that I can't find the right special girl to settle down with. You know that white picket fence kind of thing. I'm 31 yrs. old, 5'10" tall, 175 lbs. with sandy brown hair & blue/gray eyes. I'm attracted to someone who's slim, humorous, involved in sports & short with dark hair. Someone who believes in a monogamous relationship. To me life is simple. Money & material goods are great but I never want to be poor but at the end of the day I like to think family are always going to be the most important thing to me. I'm Lawrence. Get back to me. VE THE EXPERIENCE

y father had a saying: to truly ow a person, you must walk a ometre in his galoshes. Or aybe it was Obi-Wan Kenobi. yway, an upcoming fundrais- for the Pilgrim's Hospice Soci- y will let you do just that: they e auctioning off over 70 "expe- ences" during Walk in My Shoes b. 3 at the Mayfield Inn. No, ot those kind of experiences u sick puppy — watermelons e far too big, even with baby

You could spend an evening hind the scenes at a Citadel oduction, or be one of two bservers in a gosh-golly-for-real at's-not-ketchup operating om. Oilers assistant coach vin Primeau will let someone llow him around on Feb. 11 as ey prepare to face the Calgary ames, assuming he isn't traded fore then. And you could spend day at CFB "the cheque is in" mao.

The Hospice Society is Ed- onton's first free-standing me away from home for the rminally ill. The auction be- ns at 11 p.m.

Y JUNO'S BEARD!

ramids. Long believed to have ystical powers, they are sym- ls of the mysterious and the ofound. Dead Egyptians were ried in them.

New Agers meditate under em. And the Canadian Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences calls them the Junos.

Speaking of the Junos, the Academy has announced nominations for Juno Entertainer of the Year. This is the only category for which us regular non-Academy folk can vote.

The nominees are: The Tragically Hip, Bryan Adams, Shania Twain, Alanis Morrisette and Alberta's own Jann Arden. Those with strong feelings and feel they simply must vote can call 1-900-870-1200.

The winners of all Juno awards will be announced at the 25th Juno Awards, Mar. 10. The Awards ceremony takes place in Copps Coliseum in Hamilton, Ont.

HEAP ON THE SUGAR

If you're looking for an excuse to kiss your Classical-loving sweetie on Valentine's Day (not that anyone would actually need a reason), the Edmonton Symphony Orchestra will be creating enough sugar to make a diabetic cringe.

The featured artists are "lifemates" Stephen and Sue Jane Bryant, who will perform Mozart's Sinfonia Concertante — kind of the musical equivalent of a romantic comedy. Tickets are available at 428-1414 or from Ticketmaster outlets.

SPEAKING ABSTRACTEDLY

We've said it before and we'll say it again: you just can't have enough paintings with names of colors in them. That's why we're overjoyed that the Gershon Iskowitz Foundation finalized the donation of two works by Iskowitz, Red Blue - B (1980) and Blues #2 (1972-73) to the Edmonton Art Gallery.

The donations are part of a nationwide gift-giving spree of over 100 paintings to over 30 museums nationwide. The two paintings, oils on canvas, are the first Iskowitz works in the EAG's collection.

The Iskowitz Foundation was established in 1985 to promote and support visual arts in Canada. The gift is in keeping with Iskowitz's ideals of sharing visual arts with Canadians everywhere. Well, everywhere in Canada.

CAFFEINE HIGH

If there is one thing in the world that will bring the world together, what is it? Some say music. Some say the internet. And some wags say caffeine.

In fact, the answer may be all of the above, or at least two out of three. On Feb. 2, at the HUB Community Centre at the University of Alberta, the International Centre presents Coffeehouse Connection, a world beat concert with Jawapillajta and 'Miosg na Stumps.

During the concert, Bridgehead coffee, "fairly traded from farmers in the south," will be served. Beer and wine will also be available.

Jawapiilajta plays traditional Andean music, and 'Miosg na Stumps does traditional and contemporary Gaelic. The evening is part of International Week '96, a series of presentations on international issues and themes.

Tickets for Coffeehouse Connection are available from the International Centre at 172 HUB International, 492-2692.
